Acquisition broadens LogiGear's suite of world-class products and services into ERP-space via Oracle's JD Edwards EnterpriseOne and Fusion Cloud Applications

San Mateo, CA, January 18, 2021 – LogiGear, a world leader in Software Testing and Test Automation solutions, today announced the acquisition of DWS, a leading provider of Oracle's JD Edwards EnterpriseOne and Fusion Cloud Applications products and services.

The acquisition will further strengthen LogiGear's capabilities to serve the ERP (Enterprise Resources Planning) market as part of its continued business expansion into the enterprise services space, following previous acquisitions and investments in 2021. The acquisition also uniquely positions LogiGear to leverage the overlaps between its firm's capabilities and products to deliver to market powerful tools and solutions across its range of services, enabling industry leading improvements to the development, testing, applications and services delivery processes, utilizing DWS' market-leading suite.

"DWS' suite of test automation tools and consulting services enables customers to accelerate development and deployment of new enterprise services applications both internally and to the market. We're excited to expand this technology across all the major SaaS services to support all of our global customers." - Jim Ellis, CEO LogiGear Group

Acquiring DWS represents a significant move in the direction of providing a full range of services to global clients of both firms and LogiGear subsidiaries, from full software testing and custom software development services through business and digital transformation solutions built on Oracle, JD Edwards, delivering end to end enterprise services from a single provider.

"Our partnership with Logigear Corporation enables DWS to further enhance our services and products portfolio. This is coupled with an extended geographic reach and access to deep tech stack expertise and significant offshore resources in Vietnam. I look forward to a great future together that offers our customers premium services and products in the Enterprise Software marketplace." - Barry Burke, CEO DWS
